Wedding Takes Place at Parents' Home, Where Small Reception Is Held; Veil Worn by Six Other Brides

Bridge for Kennedy House

Boys' Settlement to Get Proceeds of Event Directed by Mrs. Truman Saunders

Miss Irene Pierce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pierce, was married at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, in the apartment of her parents, 11 East Sixty-eighth Street, to Mr. Norman H. Green, son of Dr. James O. Green.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, and a small reception followed. The bride wore a gown of white satin and lace, and her veil of old rose point lace had been worn by six brides before her. It belonged to the bridegroom's mother, who was Miss Amy Hewitt, daughter of the late Peter Cooper. Owing to her recent death the wedding was simple and quiet.

The bride, who is a granddaughter of the late Peter Cooper, is 27 years old. Her father, Mr. Arthur Pierce, is 67 years old, and her mother, Mrs. Arthur Pierce, is 65 years old.

The bridegroom, Mr. Norman H. Green, is 25 years old. He is a graduate of the University of the South, and is now a member of the New York State Bar.

The bride and groom will live in the apartment of the bride's parents, 11 East Sixty-eighth Street.

Drive Started to Save Pueblos' Land From Squatters

Association Will Try to Stop Bursum Bill's Passage; Calls Indians' Homes Valuable Relics of Civilization

To save the Pueblo Indians, makers of the romance of the Southwest, from what their friends believe to be threatened extermination as well as gross injustice, a committee, known as the Eastern Association on Indian Affairs, was formed yesterday afternoon at the home of Miss Elizabeth White, 115 East Fifty-fifth Street.

The immediate object of the committee is to prevent the passage of the Bursum bill, which gives a clear title to squatters on the lands of the Pueblos in New Mexico. The bill was passed by the Senate at the last session. A telegram was dispatched to a committee last night to Homer Snyder, chairman of the House Committee on Indian Affairs, and this will be followed up with a campaign of telegrams and letters from friends of the Indians throughout the country.

A telegram was received from the head of the Peabody Museum, Harvard University, urging immediate action to save this largest relic of ancient Indian civilization which the country affords. The Bursum bill, by depriving the Pueblos of their homes, would soon result in their extermination, according to the opinion of experts. About 8,000 Indians would be affected. Elwood Hendrix is chairman of the committee, Miss Elizabeth White, secretary, and other members are Stewart Cullin, director of the Brooklyn Institute of Art and Music; Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Miss Margaret Nott, Percy Jackson and Roberts Walker.

Opens Hotel Exposition

Visiting Exhibitors Guests of E. M. Statler at Lunch

The Seventh National Hotel Exposition, under the auspices of the New York State Hotel Association and the Hotel Association of New York City, was officially opened last night at the Grand Central Palace, Lexington Avenue, at Forty-sixth Street, with an address by Edward M. Tierney, chairman of the National Hotel Association and president of the American Hotel Association of the United States and Canada.

Yesterday morning the visiting hotel men gathered at the Hotel Lenox, after which they were guests at luncheon of E. M. Statler. The exhibition rooms were opened to the public at 3 p. m.

Exhibitors include labor-saving devices used in hotels, restaurants, cafeterias, clubs and dining cars. They have principal appeal to women, who may see how large hotels are managed and how labor is saved in everything from peeling potatoes to the Saturday night bath.

Philharmonic at C. C. N. Y.

The first of the ten popular priced concerts to be given by the Philharmonic Society in conjunction with the College of the City of New York and Hunter College will be held to-morrow night at 8:30 in the Great Hall of City College, where Mr. Stransky will conduct Beethoven's Fifth Symphony.

The next four concerts, under Stransky and Henry Hadley, will be given on Wednesday evenings, November 22, 23, 24 and 25, and on Friday, November 26, when the orchestra will play the last five concertos to be given during February and March at Carnegie Hall.

Wassermann Leaves Estate of $2,000 to Brother and Sister

The will of Jesse A. Wassermann, member of the Stock Exchange firm of Wassermann Bros., which failed on November 14, the day after his suicide, was filed in the Surrogate's Court yesterday. The document was executed on September 28. The executors estimated the value of the estate as $2,000 in personal property and no real estate. Mr. Wassermann bequeathed all his real estate, paintings, etchings and drawings to his sister, Mrs. Renee O'Donohue.

The transfer of the estate of August Silz, wholesale provision dealer, filed in the Surrogate's Court yesterday, places its gross value at $636,895 and the net value at $490,438. Mr. Silz died April 27, 1921. His securities were appraised at $507,028 and he owned real estate valued at $74,591. Mrs. Margaret S. Silz, widow, is the sole beneficiary and she and Justice Charles F. Finch, of the Appellate Division, are executors of the estate.

She Knew

—what Lloyd George thought of Clemenceau, and vice versa; —how the ex-Kaiser acted off stage; —Constantinople from within; —a great deal about American wives and their husbands; —the Empress Dowager of China, and her daughter, the Queen Marie and other notable women; —the choicest bits of gossip and rare anecdotes about nearly everybody who was anybody.

And Lady Susan Townley, wife of the distinguished diplomat, tells it all in her delightfully intimate autobiography.

Young Boswell Interviews Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks

BECAUSE they are the best known figures in America, she has real beauty and he has real brains, they have given more tears and laughs and thrills to the public than any other two people.

"Tess" and "Robin Hood" are excellent they stop traffic wherever they go, they are Doug and Mary.

Young Boswell sat patiently at the window while MR. and MRS. FAIRBANKS answered the early afternoon telephone calls. He was perhaps as patient because, looking down into the shops along Forty-sixth Street and hearing the motors drive up to the door of the Lenox Hotel, he had seen the Fairbanks descending from a taxi in the Place Vendôme. And it gave him a chance to examine Mary Pickford's face in repose as she chatted about to-morrow's tea. He noted the sensitive mouth, her blue eyes, always active and always smiling, and the blond curls—famous in twenty long plunges—looped up with pins. She hung up, and turned round with a shrug.

MARY PICKFORD—Well, that's that! Young Boswell—I should think you would want to have so many engagements. Do you like being so popular? And how does it feel to be in the crowds waiting to see you everywhere?

MARY PICKFORD—Of course I like it, while it lasts. The crowds give me a strange feeling. I can't quite explain. What is it, Douglas?

She turned to her husband, who had been leaning over the deluge of requests to attend charities and openings and dinners.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS—I don't know. They look at you, not at me. MARY PICKFORD—Anyway, it's very pleasant when I'm looking well.

DOUG—I remember when we were in Holland it was not so pleasant. Every time we went we'd be met at the train by the Mayor and the town council and the band, and the Mayor would make a speech. Every time just before he got to my name he would say, "poonk." You know, "poonk, poonk, poonk." So later when we crossed the Swiss border into Italy the train stopped in some little hamlet, and as they always do over there, the natives stuck their heads in at the window. One of them looked at me, shook his head, and then shouted to the others, "Lampol! Lampol!" I turned to Mary and said, "Wonder if lampo has any connection with poonk?"

MARY—Silly! We found out later that it means lightning, and that's what they call Douglas in Italy.

And then Edward Knoblock, who had been half asleep in the corner, woke up and said, "Knoblock, what do you suggest, Mary?"

MARY—I'd like to go riding in the park on an enormous side-saddle, with a long rein and a mane, and I'd stand the 'saddle. Out on the Coast we are in a half a rush. New York is good fun, but it's a half so much work to do a whole picture.

Young Boswell (who couldn't help laughing)—How long are you staying here?

DOUG—As an old cook we used to have once said, "I'll stay as long as my fee's held out."

As Young Boswell turned to go Mr. Knoblock was executing a new ballet step with his legs. "I'll give you the copyright to this little trick," he said. "You can use it in your next picture, Doug."

Fifth Avenue Association Holds Membership Luncheon

One hundred members of the Fifth Avenue Association met at luncheon at the Hotel Lenox yesterday for a one-week campaign for new members. All of those present received lists of prominent business houses and individuals whom they will ask to join the organization.

John H. Towne, secretary of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company, and Grace E. Tarbell, vice-president and general manager of the Cleveland Dispatch, spoke. Mr. Towne pointed out the remarkable growth of the association from 500 members in 1915 to 1,335 members in 1922.

Scientists to Hunt Black Rhinoceros In African Wilds

James L. Clark Heads Party to Unexplored Highlands of Great Craters; Locality Said to Contain Diamonds

James L. Clark, big game hunter and taxidermist, who mounted the Roosevelt African trophies for the Smithsonian Institution, is departing to-day at the head of a party of four on an expedition into hitherto unexplored parts of East Africa. His purpose is to bring back three specimens of black rhinoceros for the Museum of Natural History, to explore and hunt the highlands of the Great Craters, and to seek in that little known vicinity fossil and mineral deposits believed to abound in great plenty.

With Mr. Clark sailing for London on the Berengaria are Mrs. Clark, K. V. Painter, of the Bankers Trust Company, of Cleveland, and Huston Wyeth, of St. Joseph, Mo. Mrs. Clark is a sportsman, who will make up the African party. Mr. Clark has been created assistant to the director of the department of preparation of the museum, and his findings, which will be illustrated by motion pictures, are expected to prove invaluable to the local institution.

The expedition will traverse the Tanganyika territory, in what was formerly German East Africa, starting from Mombasa, where the party will arrive Christmas Day. The special objective is the Great Craters. These highlands, never completely explored, are surrounded by a broad desert, which renders them highly inaccessible. The important possibilities for hunting and scientific research in this locality have been noted at by two German scientists, who recorded in 1914 the presence of great gold and diamond deposits, as well as fossil animals, which have since been found by English sportsmen, who skinned the region on a brief shooting trip, has also furnished information of which the Clark expedition expects to make use.

The museum is especially desirous of obtaining specimens of the black rhinoceros as they will form a most necessary adjunct to the new African hall under preparation.

First Day of Tolentino Sale Realizes $14,005

Early Italian Iron Work, Furniture and Textiles at Clarke Galleries

The first sale of properties from the collection of Chevalier Raoul Tolentino, which is being dispersed this week at the Clarke galleries, incorporated yesterday specimens of early Italian wrought ironwork, furniture and textiles which realized a total of $14,005.

A Tuscan Renaissance walnut credenza from the early sixteenth century, which was obtained by Karl Freund for $350, was one of the chiefly important offerings. Others were the Queen Anne English cabinet in lacquer, which Mrs. C. B. Dillingham bought for $235, and a sixteenth century credenza which went to Mrs. A. C. Bourne for $230.

Other sales were a Tuscan walnut refectory table, to Carl Freund for $275; an Umbrian carved walnut cabinet, to Keller & Funaro for $375; another
